Â .Refugee, Hope: 10 refugees join the ranks of the Hercules The Hercules has made its way through the waves of the global refugee crisis. 10 refugees join the ranks of the USAF Cargo jet. A Hercules makes its way into Zulu Alpha Foxtrot (ZAF) Air Base (1:06) On September 16, 2016, the Hercules made its first cargo flight ever, carrying 10 refugees. The Hercules was used to deliver the refugees to South Africa, where they can be processed for eventual resettlement to the United States. The Hercules, like the Globemaster and the C-17, is in the air for a few hours. During that time, the Hercules may deliver equipment and food, and could even transport injured or sick passengers. However, in the case of the Hercules, it will be primarily as a refugee transport plane. The Hercules is getting an all-new interior. (USAF photo) The Hercules will be making its final cargo flight this month. The Hercules is an Airbus A300-600 which underwent a major upgrade in 2012, and with this new tail, the Hercules can be painted desert camouflage and carry up to 14 metric tons of cargo. The aircrew got an all-new interior, making the Hercules ready to transport refugees to the United States. The Hercules is capable of delivering people who need medical treatment as well as those with trauma or medical conditions. The Hercules has a higher clearance limit, and is capable of flying over mountainous terrain, making it perfect for refugees. The Hercules is much better suited for this purpose. (Air Force photo) The Hercules has already flown to Haiti, Dominican Republic, Ghana, and Senegal. It will be deployed to Jordan in mid-October, and is scheduled to serve in the region for a minimum of nine months. The Hercules serves a critical role in delivering the refugees to the United States.
