M-Z Drama Movie Folder Icons Screenshots: Liver transplantation for hepatitis B virus-related hepatocellular carcinoma. Liver transplantation (LT) for hepatitis B virus (HBV)-related hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC) has been restricted by the lack of ideal oncologic surgical treatment. We report the long-term survival of five HBV-positive HCC patients who underwent LT. The 5 patients consisted of three men and two women, whose ages ranged from 24 to 59 years (mean, 40.8 years). All were cirrhotic. Three patients had undergone systemic chemoembolization before LT, and two of them had undergone transarterial chemoembolization for recurrent HCC. In three patients, LT was performed due to tumor growth within the Milan criteria, with two of the three in the first recurrence after resection of the initial HCC. One of them had undergone the resection of the initial HCC 4 months before LT. The remaining patient had undergone radiofrequency ablation before LT. The median tumor size was 5.0 cm (range, 2.5-7.0 cm). One patient experienced recurrence within the Milan criteria. The other four patients had tumors that exceeded the Milan criteria. All five patients achieved complete tumor necrosis following chemoembolization. Four patients received HBV-positive grafts, and one patient received an HBV-negative graft. All patients were negative for serum hepatitis B surface antigen before transplantation. Recurrence occurred in one of four patients with a tumor size larger than the Milan criteria. The patient died of cerebral infarction 2 months after LT. The other three patients were alive at the time of writing, with 1, 3, and 5 years of follow-up, respectively. We conclude that LT is an acceptable option for HBV-related HCC, especially for patients who have failed previous chemoembolization." I have added links and downloads for the 3 above MD5 file hashes for fast downloads. I have created this page after finding that the UK site I use had stopped working and can no longer be found. With the (hopefully) temporary closure of the UK site, I have taken it upon myself to continue the work of updating the MD5 files I have already created. If any new links appear, I will do my best to update the MD5 file but I will not update existing links, so please use the updated links listed above. .zip file is a compressed folder of all of the images. You need to extract the.zip file and then you can select any of the various items to add to your Windows desktop. This page also includes a link to a wallpaper of the icons you have just installed.
