Interleukin-2 and anti-IL-2 receptor monoclonal antibodies: antitumour effects against human tumours in vivo. We have investigated the potential antitumour efficacy of interleukin-2 (IL-2) and an anti-IL-2 receptor (anti-IL-2R) monoclonal antibody in two human tumour models. In the first model, Molt 4, which is an IL-2-dependent and IL-2R-positive human T cell lymphoma, we showed that IL-2 or anti-IL-2R monoclonal antibodies (mAb) were capable of inducing in vivo antitumour activity. Intravenous (i.v.) injections of IL-2 or anti-IL-2R mAb generated antitumour activity against subcutaneous Molt 4 in both naive and established tumour hosts. In the second model, the human T cell lymphoma MOLT 4/C2, which lacks IL-2R expression, was used. We showed that treatment with an IL-2R-positive mouse mAb, or IL-2, was capable of inducing antitumour activity in an established subcutaneous MOLT 4/C2 tumour xenograft. This suggests that there is some IL-2-independent mechanism which can induce antitumour activity in the MOLT 4/C2 tumour model.

Many radio frequency (RF) and microwave frequency switches used in communication devices and other electronic equipment are implemented using PIN diodes. The use of PIN diodes in such switches may eliminate the need for an external DC power supply and a DC-to-DC converter which may require costly components and complex routing. However, the high input impedance of PIN diodes may cause the switch to be difficult to control at high speeds. The use of PIN diodes in RF switches has been enhanced by combining a PIN diode switch with an integrated capacitor, wherein the capacitor's input capacitor port is connected to a control port of the

I am taking an introductory course in Java right now. In one of the first assignments, we are asked to program an array list that simulates the amortization process. I've got the amortization process to work, but it just keeps repeating the "enter your first payment" statement, rather than just asking for the first payment. The rest of the code is shown below.
